

As I think that, Government should strongly support the software training. Hong Kong should have our program product just like linux. Many place have their own linux user group that the linux users can share and learn how to use linux and also networking. What Gov should do 1st is support linux user group, as linux is free to use can do more things than Window can. Under it, people can construct their program freely without limit. Moreover, the boardband network is far behind the world wild, in japan, the boardband is 1000M download, while hk is just 100M, also the 100M download is limit to specific area, ie, not all the area can use this 100M services. You should give them some tax allowance to develop the 100M network.
